

Main Verbs and Helping Verbs

Decide whether the underlined word(s) is the main verb, helping verb, both, or neither. Mark your answer on the answer sheet.

1. Science is hiding in many everyday objects.
A main verb C both
B helping verb D neither
2. You can find properties of science in a basic clock.
A main verb C both
B helping verb D neither
3. Some clocks are hung on the wall.
A main verb C both
B helping verb D neither
4. These clocks often run on batteries.
A main verb C both
B helping verb D neither
5. Batteries use chemical energy to make electrical energy.
A main verb C both
B helping verb D neither
6. You can make a battery from a lemon.
A main verb C both
B helping verb D neither
7. A lemon or two will provide power for a digital clock.
A main verb C both
B helping verb D neither
8. Like a regular battery, a lemon battery changes chemical into electrical energy.
A main verb C both
B helping verb D neither
9. The lemon's acid will make electricity.
A main verb C both
B helping verb D neither
10. A potato can become a battery, too.
A main verb C both
B helping verb D neither
11. Potatoes have some acid in them, as well.
A main verb C both
B helping verb D neither
12. You can find these science activities on the Internet.
A main verb C both
B helping verb D neither
13. You can make your own lemon-powered clock.
A main verb C both
B helping verb D neither
14. Or you might try other fun science projects.
A main verb C both
B helping verb D neither
15. Always ask an adult for permission before you try a project.
A main verb C both
B helping verb D neither