

Coordinating and Subordinating Conjunctions

Decide whether the underlined word is a coordinating conjunction, a subordinating conjunction, or a preposition. Mark your answer on the answer sheet.

1. Radar is an anagram that stands for *RA*dio *DE*tectio*N* *AN*d *RA*nging.
A coordinating conj. C preposition
B subordinating conj.
2. The first use of radar was in 1904, but it was only used for a short distance.
A coordinating conj. C preposition
B subordinating conj.
3. In the 1920s, radar was improved by scientists around the world.
A coordinating conj. C preposition
B subordinating conj.
4. Radar became popular by the 1930s, and it was used in World War II.
A coordinating conj. C preposition
B subordinating conj.
5. Because England and the U.S. were allies, they shared ideas about radar.
A coordinating conj. C preposition
B subordinating conj.
6. Together these countries made great advances in radar science.
A coordinating conj. C preposition
B subordinating conj.
7. Although nothing could protect from all attacks, radar prevented some German submarine attacks.
A coordinating conj. C preposition
B subordinating conj.
8. World War II ended, and people were less interested in radar.
A coordinating conj. C preposition
B subordinating conj.
9. But the Cold War made the United States interested in radar again.
A coordinating conj. C preposition
B subordinating conj.
10. Military leaders wanted to be warned if Russia was going to attack.
A coordinating conj. C preposition
B subordinating conj.
11. Again we worked with Great Britain to make better radar.
A coordinating conj. C preposition
B subordinating conj.
12. Today, you will find that radar is used almost everywhere!
A coordinating conj. C preposition
B subordinating conj.
13. It is still used in the military, but it is also used for other things.
A coordinating conj. C preposition
B subordinating conj.
14. Since the invention of the radar, it has been found to be useful in many fields.
A coordinating conj. C preposition
B subordinating conj.
15. If you've seen a "Doppler forecast," you know that radar is used to predict weather.
A coordinating conj. C preposition
B subordinating conj.
16. The police use radar to see cars' speeds, and scientists use it to study the moon.
A coordinating conj. C preposition
B subordinating conj.
17. Because radar keeps track of objects, it is used at airports.
A coordinating conj. C preposition
B subordinating conj.
18. If radar was not used, there might be collisions between airplanes!
A coordinating conj. C preposition
B subordinating conj.